

School Based Apprenticeships

Have you or your child considered the benefits of a school-based apprenticeship?

School-based apprenticeships and traineeships allow high school students to work for an employer, train towards a recognised qualification, and complete their secondary school studies. They are available across a wide range of fields, from automotive to business; radio broadcasting to watchmaking.

These apprenticeships and traineeships provide students with qualifications or skills that are recognised Australia-wide, and can count towards the Queensland Certificate of Education. Students gain hands-on experience in a workplace and are paid for it. They have the chance to also work towards an Overall Position (OP) score, and gain the confidence and contacts to move from school to work or further study.

More than 50,000 young people have experienced the benefits of this sort of training since the program first started in Queensland more than 10 years ago.

These programs provide a valuable alternative to high school students and can help them decide on a career choice. The move from school to work can often be something of a shock. These programs give students an appreciation of what life is like in the workforce. Think about it and give us a call if you need more information.
