

Become a Masterchef

The new season of Masterchef recently returned to our television screens and this phenomenon continues to inspire people of all ages to reassess their current occupation and consider making a career change that they feel provides them with the job satisfaction they yearn for.

Programs such as Masterchef clearly highlight the fact that gone are the days for the need to first attend an expensive culinary school to gain formal qualifications in commercial cookery and then source work in a kitchen and hope to someday work their way up from there. It also shows that there is no age barrier to commencing a career as a Chef.

In today's culinary arena it is all about having a passion for cooking even if it is self taught. If you have this passion and drive then the next step to your dream career is to source a commercial cookery apprenticeship which would allow you to learn and earn at the same time. In Queensland this apprenticeship is three years and is competency based so in fact you could complete it in less time. Therefore the more you put in, the more you get out of this apprenticeship.

*Professor Ashley W. Goldsworthy AO OBE
Chairman & CEO*

smart
EMPLOYMENT solutions

Springwood 13 30 24
www.sesat.com.au